

Intensive Short-Course Training

Sustainable livestock production offers individuals the opportunity for land/resource utilization, food production for home or sale, and additional income.

The WSU Extension 100-level intensive short courses focus on small to midsize sustainable production; perfect for those just starting out or for current producers looking to expand their market opportunities and sustainability.

The short courses help producers learn how to raise high quality food animals within a framework of environmental stewardship and humane, ethical treatment. Instructors include WSU Extension meat and livestock specialists with extensive knowledge in all aspects of livestock production.

The one-day intensive courses address the challenges and opportunities available to enhance the safety and quality of your beef, lamb, goat, pork, or poultry production from farm to plate.

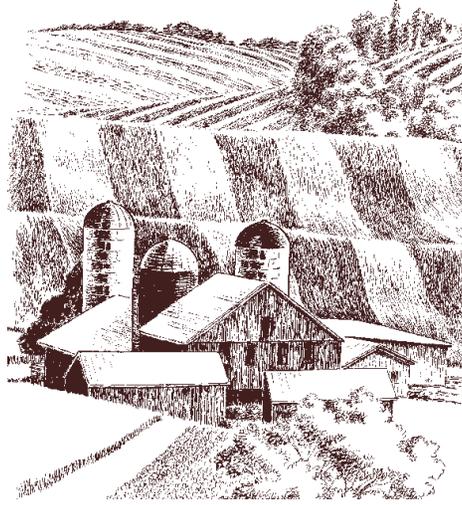

Registration includes lunch, all materials and a flash drive of resources to take home.

For more information, contact Jan Busboom, WSU Meat Specialist, (509) 335-2880, busboom@wsu.edu; or Sarah M. Smith, Area Animal Science Educator, (509) 754-2011, x413, smithsm@wsu.edu.
